

The beauty of Nature

What makes these gardens “Rake” in visitors?

Gardens and nature has always been a aspect of beauty, but in recent year Gardens across the UK have flourished in popularity and have become a favorite for family days out. As well as being a picnic spot for locals it has also become a hotspot for tourists who want to admire the beautiful flowers and plant exhibitions. People love to go to gardens to enjoy scenery and landscape; they can get peace and quiet too. People also like to come to see why these gardens are so talked about. Eda Guclu, a student, who lives in London tells me that she loves to go to Hampton Court Palace because she loves the atmosphere to do her University work in, especially in the warmer months. Although it is pricey for a student she says it’s worth it because the scenery is amazing. Haroon Rauf, from Birmingham, is a prime example of a “tourist” who wants to see every bit of a city that he goes to. He’s been to both Kew Gardens and Royal

“You need to be able to appreciate the beauty”

Royal Botanic Gardens Edinburgh, he explains how he likes to see why these gardens are given such importance too. “You need to be able to appreciate the beauty in something like these national gardens because if you can’t then you’re better off going to a place like Hyde park that is completely free but definitely for family days out and just chilling. Gardens like these are worth the price especially if you don’t come often” he says. So whether you want to go out for a nice day trip to relax and unwind, or just to admire the scenery with family and friends, gardens are perfect, and since everyone is visiting, why don’t you?

