My target audience is primarily aimed at people of any age and mostly for those who live around my patch area. They will be attracted by the different stories which can either inform them or be a dramatic story which will grab their attention to it. With my site I have made it seem easy to access and look neat which gives the audience the need to want to come back to the site.

I wanted my logo to look elegant yet not look overdone which is why I went for this logo

The images that I have used are either my own or were able to be freely reused for my articles. As images can only be scaled down and not up some of the images which I took could not be used and therefore alternatives had to be used.

Navigation around the website is simple as the menus can direct readers to articles which are laid out down the middle section of the page and any other information such as contact details and the about page being found on the right hand side of the page.

With the future of the site I aim to look for and attend more places of interest and events which I could make a review as well as to continue reporting on any news which comes out of my patch area. I also want to develop it to look at more news from around the world.

I regularly visit the BBC News website because their articles are well written and they deliver content in a fair and accurate manner. I was inspired by their house style which is effective as it places the main stories in full view of the reader and others along the bottom and sides. I was inspired to choose my theme by looking at the BBC website.

Another news website I regularly visit is The Guardian because of the articles which are well written as well as their live updates which are useful when wanting to learn of breaking news.
