Showing off

DECEMBER 12, 2017 BY CHARLIE WETTON

"We'd like to be done out of a job" – life on the foodbank frontline.

With hundreds of thousands of visits to foodbanks occurring every year, coupled with benefit cuts and delays, how do staff on the frontline cope, reports Charlie Wetton

It's not often you find people who will so openly preach about wanting to lose their job. But for the coordinator of a Kennington foodbank – Rebekah Gibson, it is something that she longs for. I sat down with her during the middle of a standard two-hour session of the Oasis Centre in Kennington.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

I'm an enthusiastic undergraduate journalism student due to start my final year in September 2018. I'm passionate about current affairs and sport. These have been the main focus of my degree so far. I'm seeking an internship to broaden my skills and experience within a media setting.

WORK EXPERIENCE

Team Member June 2017-August 2017
Simple Health Kitchen, Baker Street London

As a Team Member in this small local restaurant, my responsibilities included: Serving customers in a fast-paced environment. Keeping the restaurant clean and tidy. When it was quiet I was responsible for preparing sauces for the next day. I was also responsible for organising the takeaway orders that came through.

The job was highly enjoyable, and I learnt to work with a positive customer focus whatever the demands. The lunch shift would see lots of customers enter within a short period of time and I had to make sure that they were served in a timely manner and that we had enough food available as they arrived.

I have held a variety of other service industry roles prior to starting my Journalism degree

EDUCATION

3 A-levels from Totton College in Hampshire 2010-2012
English Language (C), Religious Studies (D) and Sociology (B)

8 GCSEs: Grade C and above including English, 2009-2011
Math's and Science from Wyvern College in Salisbury

ACHIEVEMENTS

Creating a YouTube page for our University Football team. I maintain and update the page with new content and post the updates to social media platforms.

I am the President of the University Football team and manage the fixtures, players, training, venues and transport in co-ordination with the university Student Union.
